Introduction

These photographs, numbering somewhat fewer than 1100, were taken by Professor James Henry Breasted and his colleagues on two reconnaissance trips to Nubia during the years 1905–1907.¹ It was Professor Breasted's wish to record the historical monuments and inscriptions of ancient Nubia, for, as Charles Breasted wrote in the biography of his father, Pioneer to the Past, "the meticulous recording of long-known, steadily perishing, and largely unpublished historical monuments above ground had about it almost none of the excitement and fascination popularly associated with digging for buried treasure. But he was more than ever convinced that however much the excavations of men like Petrie, Davis, Quibell and others might contribute to Egyptology, he himself could render it no greater service than to copy while they were still legible the historical records in the ancient monuments of Egypt."

Breasted's first campaign to Nubia began in November, 1905, and ended in April, 1906. Professor Breasted's travels with Mrs. Breasted, Charles, an American engineer, Victor Persons, and a German photographer, Friedrich Koch, began in Alexandria, where they boarded a train to Cairo. From there they traveled by rail to Luxor (Thebes) and then southward to Aswân. Breasted and his crew worked for forty days photographing and copying inscriptions at Abû Simbel and then moved on to their last stop at Wadi Halfa. Charles Breasted said that by April 3, 1906, his father had finished copying the historic inscriptions in all the pre-Ptolemaic temples of Lower Nubia, the region between the First and Second Cataracts. Breasted had accomplished this by a new method, whereby Mr. Koch would photograph an inscription and make blueprints from the negatives, which Breasted would then collate with the original. They often had to work in almost intolerable conditions, by candlelight in the dark rock-hewn tombs, with their heat, bats, and foul air.

On his second trip Breasted went along the upper Nile in the northern Sudan, beginning again at Cairo, in October of 1906. Accompanying him on this reconnaissance were photographer Horst Schliephack and English Egyptologist Norman de Garis Davies, an excellent copyist and draftsman. The expedition began this season at Meroë, where Breasted and Davies began key plans of the pyramids. The group then moved fifty miles by caravan and train southwestward to Naga'. Charles Breasted has reported that the monuments recorded there, together with those of Meroë, were all that had survived of the history of Nubia as an independent nation. Next, after a caravan march of five hours, the expedition photographed the Nubian palaces at Muṣauwarât and then traveled by rail to Khartûm, arriving in the midst of the Moslem Bairam festival. From there they moved on to Abû Ḥamed, at the head of the Fourth Cataract, and then followed the entire 400 mile westward swing of the Nile from the foot of the Fourth Cataract to the foot of the Third by boat. Along the Fourth Cataract stops were made at Kareima, Gebel Barkal (Napata), and Dongola. At the head of the Third Cataract on the Island of Tumbos the expedition photographed the five triumphal stelae of Tuthmosis I. Other stops along the way included Dulgo, Gurgot, and Soleb. At Kosheh the group came ashore for difficult land travel, including the pass of Doshat. Stops were made at the Island of Sai, Sedeinga, 'Amâra, Tangûr, Kumma (Semna East), Semna West, the Island of Uronarti, and Sarras. They reached their last stop, Wadi Halfa, on March 5, 1907, the day on which Professor Breasted proudly wrote in his journal, "At Halfa we were 1000 miles up the Nile. From a point nearly 1000 miles still farther up, beginning with the southernmost ancient monuments in the Nile valley—that is, nearly 2000 miles from the Mediterranean—the expedition has this year carried the work of exploration and recording down to our last year's 1000-mile starting point."

1. The arrangement of the photographs follows the alphabetical order of the sites Breasted visited. The photographs of each site are arranged in accordance with the standard bibliography of Egyptian sites, Topographical Bibliography of Ancient Egyptian Hieroglyphic Texts, Reliefs, and Paintings, Vol. VII, Nubia, the Deserts, and Outside Egypt (Oxford, 1951), by Bertha Porter and Rosalind L. B. Moss. Photos referred to by Porter and Moss that are not included here have not survived in usable condition. In Volume 2, on Cards 6 and 7, are photographs of less scientific value but important nevertheless for their record of contemporary Egypt and the Sudan at the time of the trip. These are arranged in a separate group, again according to locations.

Text/Fiche

James Henry Breasted (1865-1935), founder of the Oriental Institute, left an indelible mark on the study of ancient Egypt. This Text/Fiche provides the most complete pictorial record ever published of Breasted's reconnaissance trips to Egypt and the Sudan.

Unlike those who excavated the ruins of Egypt, Breasted was most concerned with recording the historical monuments and inscriptions of ancient Nubia. No one before or since Breasted has traveled the length of Nubia to make such a photographic record. These photographs are especially important today because many of the monuments shown here no longer exist or have been moved from their original sites to escape the flood waters of the Nile.

These two volumes offer almost 1,100 photographs, many printed from the original glass plates, from the archives of the Oriental Institute. Volume 1, which consists of an introduction and six fiches, includes views of the ancient sites of Abû Simbel, Amara, Gebel Barkal, Karnak, and the Mediq District, to name a few. Volume 2, with seven fiches, includes other ancient sites such as Meroe, Semna East and Semna West, and Soleb, as well as photographs of the expedition itself and contemporary scenes along Breasted's route.
