MATERIALS FOR THE ASSYRIAN DICTIONARY

The publication of this volume marks the beginning of a new philological series entitled "Materials for the Assyrian Dictionary." The new series is supposed to take care of the publication of a large number of manuscripts which have been prepared for the use of the Assyrian Dictionary in the last few years. They pertain chiefly to local and dialectal glossaries, reconstructions of Sumero-Akkadian lexical series, and transliterations and translations of new or badly treated texts. The volumes will appear at irregular intervals. The first to appear in 1952 will be three volumes containing a comprehensive treatment of Old Akkadian:

- I. Sargonic Texts from The Diyala Region
- II. Old Akkadian Writing and Grammar
- III. Glossary of Old Akkadian

PREFACE

This is the first volume of a series devoted to the comprehensive treatment of the Old Akkadian written sources. It contains the transliterations of Sargonic texts from the Diyala region plus indices of proper names and a catalogue of tablets. The next volumes will contain a general introduction to Old Akkadian, a discussion of Old Akkadian writing and grammar, and a complete Old Akkadian glossary.

The great majority of texts reproduced here in transliteration come from the excavations of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago in the Diyala region. As such they form part of the official program of publication of the materials excavated by the Oriental Institute, and they should have been reproduced first in copies and/or photographs, following the standard practice in Assyriology. Other duties, especially in connection with work on the Chicago Assyrian Dictionary, having prevented the author from fulfilling his obligation towards the official publication of the Diyala Sargonic texts, two roads were left open to the author: either to search for an opportunity to reproduce the texts in copies and/or photographs, and thus postpone the publication of the whole Old Akkadian series; or to make the texts available to the scholarly world immediately in transliteration, continue with other volumes in the series, and hope for an opportunity in the farther future to publish the texts in the standard form. The author has chosen the second alternative, owing mainly to the urgency of having the texts made immediately available to the Assyrian Dictionary staff for the historical reconstruction of lexical materials.

Signs abnormal in form or difficult to read have been copied in cuneiform to enable scholars to visualize better the involved problems.

Of the 336 texts transliterated in this volume, Nos. 1-269 were excavated by the Oriental Institute in the years 1931-37 at the sites of Tell Asmar, Khafaje, and Tell Agrab. They can be subdivided as follows:

Nos. 1-195. Tablets from Tell Asmar, seasons 1931/32 to 1934/35. With the exception of No. 195 allotted to the Oriental Institute, all the tablets belong to the Iraq Museum but are now on loan to the Oriental Institute.

Nos. 196-266. Tablets from Khafaje, seasons 1934/35 to 1935/36. One half of the tablets were allotted to the Oriental Institute, where they are now housed, bearing Oriental Institute Museum numbers; the other half, belonging to the Iraq Museum, are now in Baghdad. Unfortunately, all the tablets from Khafaje were baked so hard by the field expedition that they are very difficult to clean and consequently to read. Some of the Baghdad tablets are reproduced here from Thorkild Jacobsen's field catalogue (marked "T.J."); others were transliterated, fully or partially, by the author during his short stay in Baghdad in the summer of 1947 (marked "G").

Nos. 267-269. Tablets from Tell Agrab, season 1936/37, now in the Iraq Museum. Transliterated by the author in the summer of 1947.

Nos. 270-336 constitute a substantial collection of tablets acquired by the Oriental Institute in January, 1930. Both the information given by the dealer from whom the collection was purchased and the internal evidence culled from the tablets make it quite clear that they were clandestinely excavated by the villagers at Tell Asmar. The internal evidence is based chiefly on the identification of personal names found on the acquired tablets with those occurring on the tablets actually excavated at Tell Asmar:

Šu-Ma-ma, Zu-na-núm, Kir-ba-núm, DINGIR-gi-ma-at occur in A 7822 and TA 31, 1.

Ì-lu-lu MUŠEN.DÙ occurs in A 7822 rev. iii and TA 31, 6A, 7 rev. x+i.

DINGIR-dan DUMU Ih-zu-zum occurs in A 7862 rev. and TA 31, 1A, 4 x+i.

A 7784 and A 7832 are identical in structure with TA 31, 2.

A 7767, A 7795, A 7818, A 7820, and A 7879 are identical in structure with TA 31, 10A, 16.

Another collection of tablets from the Diyala region, acquired some time ago by the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago, will be published separately in the near future.

The system of transliteration follows generally the principles as outlined in my Memorandum on Transliteration and Transcription of Cuneiform, submitted to the 21st International Congress of Orientalists, Paris (Chicago, 1948, mimeographed).

Signs representing logograms are transliterated in small cap roman, regardless of whether their Sumerian reading is indicated or not.

Signs representing polyphonous syllabic values are treated in two ways. Full polyphony, involved in one sign having such diverse values as lum or núm, is indicated throughout; qualified polyphony, involved in one sign functioning as da, tá, or ta, is never indicated. In the case of full polyphony we transliterate i-lum or da-núm, ar-ši or sá-lim according to need. In the case of qualified polyphony only the first value is used, as in da-mu-ru not tá-mu-ru, i-da-ba-aḥ not i-ta-ba-aḥ. Only in the case of syllabic signs ending in stops and sibilants, such as AD, IZ, LIG, the distinction between voiced, voiceless, and emphatic consonants is regularly indicated, as in the transliterations of dam-ga-at, iq-bí, ^dMa-lik, I-ba-lí-is. In the case of indecision voiced consonant is normally used, as in Ad-mar, Ia-wi-ib-tum.

Homophonous signs whenever necessary are distinguished in accordance with Thureau-Dangin's system, as in sa and sá, še and šè, ir and ir̄.

Some texts which need special treatment, such as Nos. 180, 186 (school tablets) or No. 333 (incantation), have not been transliterated in this volume; they will be discussed in full at some future date.

The importance of the texts here transliterated is of twofold character. They furnish us with linguistic materials from the oldest periods of Akkadian, and thus are of basic importance for the understanding of the historical evolution of the Akkadian language. The texts pertain chiefly to rural administration and help us greatly in the understanding of the agricultural economy of ancient Mesopotamia. This economy revolves around large private estates, called bîtum in Akkadian and É in Sumerian, and show no trace of anything like "temple economy" or "state economy," so freely and frequently posited by other scholars for the pre-Hammurabi period.

In the preparation of this manuscript I was helped greatly by Professor Thorkild Jacobsen, especially in parts pertaining to the Khafaje tablets and those acquired by the Oriental Institute. Also to Professor F. W. Geers goes my gratitude for help in the interpretation of some difficult passages.

4. Month Names

In addition to occurrences of month names in the Diyala tablets the following list gives also the references to month names in other Sargonic tablets. This is done in order to enable scholars to visualize the extent of the Akkadian calendar in the Sargonic period. The order of Akkadian month names cannot at present be reconstructed. Another, Sumerian, calendar can be attested both at Adab and Lagāš.
