Introduction

Small finds and pottery are illustrated here in two separate sections: the catalog and the plates.

The catalog presents all of the small finds and complete vessels from Chatal Höyük: those that are at the Oriental Institute Museum, and those that were recorded and graphically documented during the excavations. The latter may currently be located at the Archaeological Museum in Antioch, or they may have been discarded. The catalog does not include pottery sherds.

The catalog is divided into functional categories (see the definition on p. 22), and in each functional category small finds are divided into subcategories (as defined in table 3). Subcategories are presented in chronological order defined by their context of retrieval. Unless otherwise indicated, all information in the catalog was collected by the author, based on the available documentation and direct observation of the objects. The following fields used in the catalog require additional explanation:

Catalog number (cat. no.): Catalog numbers are a series of consecutive numbers used as unique identifiers for objects. Only the Aegyptiaca (pp. 180–90) are listed according to the Museum inventory number.

Museum registration: 'OIM' indicates inventory numbers given by the Oriental Institute Museum; 'Ant' indicates inventory numbers given by the Archaeological Museum in Antioch, which were assigned in the 1930s. 'Ant (no reg)' indicates that the object was not registered in the museum and may also have been discarded.

FDN: These are field numbers given during the excavations (see p. 13).

Class: This is an object subcategory (see pp. 24–26); for the definitions of 'locus (LCS)', 'cache', 'level', and 'phase' see pp. 15–16. The catalog also comprehends those objects found in the small base cut (SBC), a small trench dug into the Late Chalcolithic levels of square W-16 and already published in Braidwood and Braidwood 1960.

The locus is indicated as it was on the object itself, or on the object card. Level numbering (in both Roman and Arabic) is been explained in the text part, pp. 3–4. Some graphic symbols employed by Braidwood to better define the locus have been changed into abbreviations. Definitions are:

Base (found at the bottom of the locus)
Baskets (found in the baskets used to remove earth)
Chute (found in collapsed walls)
Clearing (found cleaning the square)
Down (found at the bottom of the locus)
Dump (found in the dumped earth near the excavations)
Edge (found at the edge of the square)
Fill (found in the filling)
Floor (found on the floor)
Fortifications, or Fo (found near the mound wall)
Grave (found inside a grave or in the level of the graves)
High (found in the upper part of the locus)
Low (found in the lower part of the locus)
Pit (found inside a pit or well)
Silo (found inside a silo)
SF (found near the top soil)
SF followed by a -1, -0.5, or other Arabic numerals (provides the depth in meters below surface)
Street (found on the street belonging to that locus)
To (found moving towards another locus)
Tr (found inside a trench in the locus)
Wall (found inside the mudbricks)
Wagons (found in the wheel barrel used to remove earth)

Material, Preservation, Color, Dimensions, Description: The data given in these fields are based on direct observation of the objects in question for the OIM small finds. For the small finds not directly available, the data are based on information contained in the object cards, as well as photos and inventory lists. The descriptions of the Aegyptiaca were carried out by Günther Höylbl.

Details: This field contains bibliographic references for objects that have already been published, additional observation for its interpretation, or "(Mus)" if the object has been identified in the archaeological Museum of Antakya.

Image: All objects and small finds kept at the Oriental Institute Museum have been photographed by the author except for the 360-degree photographs of the cylinder seals, which were taken by Wayne Pitard of the Spurlock Museum. The photos of the other objects not kept in the OI Museum were taken by the archaeological team during the excavations and are part of the OI Museum Archives.

The printed version of the catalog does not present two large functional groups: Dress and Personal Accessories_Ornaments (beads, necklaces, bracelets, pendants, rings), and Tools and Equipment_Textiles (spatulae, needles, spindle whorls). These are available as additional material online.

Plates: The plates mainly present the pottery inventory and are divided by excavation area and then level, starting with the most ancient level in each area. Pottery descriptions are provided for plates concerning the ceramic material, while small finds are described in detail in the catalog. Catalog numbers (when available) are provided either in the pottery descriptions or in the captions.

Sherds were drafted by the author or by students. Angela Altenhofen drafted all the complete vessels and small finds illustrated in this volume. Black-and-white pottery drawings have been digitized with AutoCAD by the author and Corrado Alvaro; black-and-white drawings of small finds were processed by Corrado Alvaro; and color pottery drawings were digitized and processed by Tiziana d'Este. The photographs used for the Aegyptiaca were taken by K. Bryce Lowry and by Günther Hölbl. The photographs used in the cache presentations are the same as those employed in the catalog.

Approximately fifteen percent of the pottery sherds were drafted. Additionally, all complete vessels with good archaeological context have been illustrated except for those already published in Swift 1956 (references are given in the catalog). All pottery drawings are illustrated in a 1:3 scale except for few large-scale vessels, which are illustrated at a scale of 1:6. One graphic scale is left in each plate in order to check the dimensions. All items presented in one plate are at the same scale unless otherwise specified.

The object is at this point broken. It seems that two other perforations were located near the maximum diameter, forming a triangle with the internal one. Incised decoration on one base: concentric bands with waves and rosette in central circle. The last one is partially broken off. One side band with crosshatch decoration. Plate 177d.
341 OIM_A12646	a-1991	Container_box_lid	W-12_IIIb	—	I_05	07_O_Mid	Greenish stone	Fragment	Gray	L. 103 mm; W. 35 mm (preserved)	—	—	Pyxis lid, rectangular, more than half broken off. The preserved part bears a perforation (8 mm). Two wide incised grooves symmetric to the perforation on the side. The lid seems to have been reused as a kohl box, as on one side it seems to bear traces of a hollow running lengthwise. Traces of use on bottom. Incised decoration: wavy line running along external edge of the upper base, traces of circles possibly central to the piece. Two sides are decorated with crosshatch.

The seal is rolled vertically, probably on the shoulder of the vase. Impression is worn and not complete. From right to the left: one standing figure walking to the right with round hat. Upper part of the body is naked, lower part completely covered by a long skirt. Right arm is bent in front of the chest, the other is broken off. His feet are not visible. Three figures stand behind him: one figure with long plissé robe/skirt, feet are pointed to the left. Second figure with long plissé robe/skirt, feet are pointed to the right. Third figure again with long plissé robe/skirt, feet point to the left. Upper part of bodies of these figures is not preserved, apparently they are represented in profile, the first one facing right, the second and third one facing left (despite the position of their feet). It appears a round hat and raised hands. Two circles fill the space between figures. A last element is located at the left edge of impression, not arguable. “Phase M, CH +- V, broken unnumbered sherds”

1090 OIM_A26974	e-0016	Lion	J-9_03	—	IVa_03b	06_O_ Beg	Greenish stone	Fragment	Greenish gray	L. 66 mm; H. 70 mm; D. 11 mm (perforation); W. 40 mm (lion); D. 26 mm (handle)	—	Green stone handle of a censer. Lion protome on the handle of a censer. The mouth of the lion is broken off, the whole bowl is missing. The hair of the lion is rendered with crosshatch. Inlays were probably located in a long rectangle above the forehead, in a circle between the eyes, and in the eyes of the lion. The circle between the eyes preserves this inlay, which is made of white limestone. The perforation is immediately under the jaw of the lion. A ring was located at the base of the figure. Plate 188c.
1091 OIM_A12658	a-1900	Lion; hand	W-14_IIIb	—	I_04	07_O_ Mid	Greenish stone	Whole, archaeology complete	Greenish	D. 71 mm (bowl); H. 56 mm; W. 51 mm (lion); L. 37 mm (lion); H. 33 mm (lion)	—	Lion/hand censer. Very deep bowl with flat lip. External rim is decorated with concentric arches in a row. Bottom: Hand, schematic palm, fingers are all the same size. Nails and knuckles are rendered with parallel lines. At height of wrist on bottom of handle, is decorated with crosshatch. In the space between the tops of fingers and the rim (due to the unusual depth of the bowl) two bands decorated with oblique lines in a pattern cross each other, starting from the paws of the lion and reaching two fingers of the hand. Tube: Lion has forelegs outstretched around bowl, mouth is not opened but the usual perforation is located under his jaw. Head appears to be slightly flattened. Nose, front teeth, and outstretched tongue are rendered in detail. Eyes still have inlays made of limestone with red jasper or carneol for the pupil. Eyebrows are rendered with two parallel lines at the center of the forehead; red jasper was also inlayed there. Ears are flattened and rounded atop the mane, which is rendered with the same crosshatch pattern as the bands crossing each other. Forelegs are geometrically rendered and not of the same length; paws are very similar to fingers. Two holes separate the shoulder of the lion from the bowl. The tube is partially broken—only the plain junction to it is preserved. Plate 188a.

Head, forelegs, and handle part are preserved, bowl is missing; the teeth are also possibly partially broken off. The fur is rendered with incised rhomboidal forms, the ears are bent to the back, modeled and incised. Inlays in the eyes are missing. Forefront is marked by a wavy line in relief, eyebrows by two incised parallel arches. Nose and mustache are also rendered with incised lines. Paws are slightly worn but fingers are still visible. Lower jaw is missing, as it was possibly part of the bowl, which appears to have been deliberately broken away. The peg for the handle is preserved (L. 22 mm), the join between the peg and the animal is collared (as usual). Plate 187d.
1094 OIM_A17414	b-1051	Lion	M-8_02	—	—	—	Greenish stone	Fragment	Dark gray	L. 72 mm; W. 57 mm; H. 48 mm; D. 20 mm (handle); L. 20 mm (handle)	—	Part of a censer, diorite, handle and lion preserved. The bowl is almost completely broken off. The lion has its forepaws on the bowl, its hair is rendered with triangles in relief. Nose, mustache, and teeth are naturalistically rendered, ears are low and pointing to the back. Mouth is open; the perforation is located inside the mouth of the lion. Lower jaw is also partially rendered inside the bowl. One eye still has this limestone inlay. Plate 187e.

1096 OIM_A12662	a-0143	Lion	Baskets	—	—	—	Greenish stone	Fragment	Black	R. 37 mm (bowl); Depth 29 mm (bowl); L. 43 mm (head); W. 32 mm (head); D. 8 mm (piercing)	—	Basalt censer with lion's head protruding on the bowl. The right paw of the lion rests on the bowl's rim. The bottom of the bowl is decorated with geometric and floral patterns. The head of the lion is preserved, as is a small part of the bowl. The censer is partially broken along the perforation, under the jaw of the animal. The fur of the lion is rendered with crosshatching; the nose, mustache, and teeth are rendered in detail. The paw has four fingers. Along the rim on the external part there is a band with lines. On the body was probably a floral pattern. The inlays for the eyes are not preserved anymore.
1097 Ant_5307	b-0651	Lion; floral	S-9	—	—	—	Dark gray stone	Whole	Gray	L. 150 mm; L. 29 mm (shaft); D. 905 mm	—	Censer, lion, and palmette. Bottom: Triple paired volutes with alternating edges. Rim: Simple zigzag decoration. Tube: Lion's forepart, paws on the bowl, fur is rendered with crosshatching, pointed ears. Eyes with inlays missing. Jaw is represented on the bottom of the bowl. Very fine carving.

It seems that the figure had to fit a specific shape, likely a handle. However, no other clues suggest this function. Horns are in relief on the top, one of them bears diagonal lines. Eyes are similar to those of the Persian horse, pupil and lid in relief, two arches mark the left eyebrow. Ears are rendered in profile, the left one is much more detailed. The right eye and eyebrow appear unfinished and mislocated compared to the left ones. The left ear also appears to be unfinished. The nose is marked by three incised parallel lines; on the sides of the mouth two circles in relief suggest a bridle. The neck appears to be cut and not broken, possibly an unfinished handle.

OIM_A17438	b-1263	IMP_Egy	H-7_01	Faience	Fragments	Pale green	—	Aegyptiaca	Twenty-sixth Dynasty (664–525 BC)	Several fragments of Egyptian New Year's flask. Lentil-shaped form; spout is shaped like a simple papyrus umbel, handles are missing. The few fragments of the so-called large collar on the shoulder part show a relief and the usual row of drops. The hieroglyph new-year inscription on the narrow side begins according to what is available with "Amun might open a good year..." [to the owner]. Three incised lines, which surround the whole bottle, border the inscription. The surface is glazed (pale green).

OIM_A12679	a-1429	Pendant	U-14_IIIb	—	—	I_04	07_O_Mid	Faience	Fragment	Pale blue	L. 23 mm; W. 14 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Amulet shaped like a papyrus column. On a base. The upper part is formed by a slightly protruding capital in the shape of a papyrus umbel, structured through flat engravings. On the top there was possibly a sitting cat with a suspension loop on the back. The original pale blue glaze is almost completely faded, and several somewhat rough bubbles are spread on the surface. Egyptian.
OIM_A12681	a-0305	Pendant	N-13_Ia	—	—	II_04	07_O_Mid	Faience	Fragment	Pale blue	L. 31 mm; W. 20 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Amulet shaped like a Ptah Pataikos. The body is detailed in the regions of the stomach and pubic area; the belt and necklace (if Pataikos) are also rendered in detail; on the back side is the Egyptian pillar. The amulet is pierced under the left arm. A second perforation that does not pass through is located on the back. A hollow is located on the top. Head is missing, feet and base are chipped. Whitish faience, the turquoise color has faded but it is visible in several spots.
OIM_A12682	a-0871	Pendant	V-12	—	—	—	—	Faience	Fragment	Pale blue	L. 26 mm; W. 12 mm; Th. 17 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Amulet, sitting Isis with Horus on lap. The chair is decorated with crosshatch, arms, legs, and feet schematically rendered. The legs of the sitting baby are clearly visible. Upper part of the figure and the body of the baby are missing. Behind the figure are several white incrustations. Whitish faience, turquoise glaze is in part faded but still well preserved.
OIM_A17266	a-0336	Pendant	V-13	—	—	I_00	09_P-S	Faience	Whole	Pale blue	L. 16 mm; W. 9 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Rectangular base of a statuette. Probably a standing figure. Pale blue glaze is mostly faded.

OIM_A17362	b-0172	Pendant	N-10_SF	—	—	—	—	Faience	Whole	Pale blue	L. 23 mm; W. 8 mm; Th. 12 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Amulet, standing figure, pierced at ear level, flat base. The figure wears a conical cap, and apparently is in a walking position. The figure is very simplified and therefore not identifiable. Turquoise glaze is completely preserved.
OIM_A17363	b-0173	Pendant, wedjat eye	N-10_SF	—	—	—	—	Faience Egyptian blue	—	Pale blue	L. 17 mm; W. 12 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Wedjat eye. No incised or modeled details, just flat outline. The turquoise glaze is in part faded to white, in part well preserved. Single bubbles.
OIM_A17366	b-0209	Pendant	P-13_01a	—	—	II_02	08_O_ Late	Faience	Whole	Pale blue	L. 34 mm; W. 22 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Amulet in shape of a cowrie shell. Pierced lengthwise, turquoise glaze only partially worn off. Egyptian.
OIM_A17387	b-0565	Pendant	N-12_01a	—	—	II_01	08_O_ Late	Faience	Fragment, preserved more than 80%	Pale blue	L. 28 mm; W. 16 mm; Th. 10 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Amulet perforated widthwise in the shape of a rabbit. Animal represented crouching on base. The body has small rear legs, the forelegs are worn off, the face has bulging eyes and a long nose. Two oversized ears are attached to the head and connected with the back, as is typical in many amulets of this type. The faded glaze keeps the original blue-green glaze, especially on the ears. Egyptian production.
OIM_A17390	b-0595	Pendant, wedjat eye	M-12_02	—	—	II_02	08_O_ Late	Faience	Whole	Red	L. 30 mm; W. 28 mm; Th. 6 mm	Aegyptiaca	10th–8th century BC	Wedjat eye inserted inside a square. Perforated lengthwise. The eye is rendered in detail with white pupil and black eyebrow. A dark red is used for the other elements as well as for the frame. Egyptian of the Libyan period.
OIM_A17393	b-0622	Pendant	N-12_ Dump	—	—	—	—	Faience	Whole	Pale blue	L. 23 mm; H. 18 mm; Th. 9 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Amulet in shape of Bes. The god is crouched down on the base and holds his hands on his knees. Grotesque, ape-like face; his head is directly on his stomach. A four-feather crown is on his head, which is perforated at the base (to be hung). On the back is the Egyptian pillar, which sharpens to the top. Whitish to light beige faience with turquoise glaze. Egyptian production.

OIM_A17273	c-0240	Scarab	W-14_IIIb	—	W-14/4	I_04	07_O_Mid	Steatite	Whole	White, glazed	L. 16 mm; W. 11 mm; H. 1 mm	Aegyptiaca	Early 1st millenium BC	Scarab. Typology: low back, triangular head whose side lines merge into the clypeus, no plates. Double line division between pronotum and elytra, large triangular humerial callosities; horizontal groove replaces the legs. Probably burnt steatite with traces of greenish glossy glaze remains. Horizontally decorated bottom: on the center is the royal name Thutmose III (1479–1425 BC) between two vertical grooves. On both sides two tripartite Papyrus stems develop to the outside. Egyptian or Asiatic, early 1st millennium BC.
OIM_A17274	c-0257	Scarab	W-15_III	—	W-15/2	I_03	08_O_Late	Egyptian blue	Whole	Pale blue	L. 11 mm; W. 9 mm; H. 5 mm	Aegyptiaca Meyer 2008, no. 430	Early to mid-8th century BC	Scarab. Typology: small, flat lunate head with clypeus, which ends in three lobes. Vestigial plates. Segmentation of pronotum and elytra through single lines; two simple parallel lines replace the legs. On the vertically decorated bottom, above a horizontal rill, only the split ankh-symbol on the left is recognizable. Asiatic, possibly Syrian production. Early to middle 8th century.
OIM_A17275	c-0284	Scarab	U-14_III	—	—	I_03	08_O_Late	Steatite	Whole	Whitish	L. 15 mm; W. 11 mm; H. 7 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Scarab. Typology: corrugated lunate head which is clearly separated from the clypeus; this one forms a unity with the structurless plates. A single line divides the pronotum from the elytra, while three lines divide the elytra from each other. Humeral allosities marked by two(?) oblique grooves. Legs are rendered but not deep cut. Whitish grained steatite without preserved glaze. Horizontally decorated bottom: inside an incised oval a winged sphinx sits looking to the right in front of a feather. Phoenician production.

OIM_A17352	b-0027	Scarab	Q-14_SF	—	—	II_00	08_O/ Surf	Brown steatite	Whole	White	L. 14 mm; W. 10 mm; H. 8 mm	Aegyptiaca	9th or 8th century BC	Scarab Typology: triangular head merging into the clypeus. Structure of the pronotum and elytra through single lines. Two horizontal grooves replace the legs. Brownish steatite. Bottom is vertically divided into two registers. On the top there is a stylized headless sphinx with flagellum. A reed replaces the head; behind it there are three horizontal lines, which together with the reed form the name "Amun" and consequently characterize the sphinx. Lower register: "Amun-Re" with the Red Crown (jns) being read as "j." Palestinian production.
OIM_A17396	b-0720	Scaraboid seal stamp	N-12_02	—	—	II_03	08_O_ Late	Faience	Whole	Green	L. 19 mm; W. 13 mm; H. 5 mm	Aegyptiaca Meyer 2008, no. 525	—	Oval scaraboid, faience or glassy paste, plain body. A line limits the field. Bottom: standing figure facing right wearing a knee-length robe. The back arm is slightly bent, the front one is raised. A Maat feather stands on the figure's front foot.
OIM_A17448	b-1420	Scarab	K-4_01	—	—	—	—	Steatite	Whole, worn	Yellowish	L. 16 mm; W. 11 mm; H. 6 mm	Aegyptiaca Meyer 2008, no. 431	—	Scarab. Typology: low back, head merges into the clypeus; only lateral cuts separate the thin pronotum from the rear part; two horizontal careless grooves replace the legs of the scarab. Vertically decorated bottom: a sun disc over a nfr-sign is surrounded by four boat-shaped elements. An unclear sign is also located in each of these boat-shaped elements. Asiatic production.
OIM_A17469	b-1854	Scarab	U-8_Wall	—	—	—	—	Faience	Whole	Yellowish	L. 14 mm; W. 11 mm; H. 6 mm	Aegyptiaca	—	Scarab. Typology: head merges into the clypeus, vestigial plates. The distinction between pronotum and elytra is almost not discernible; three clumsy grooves replace the legs and form a triangle (they don't touch each other at the corners) and small vertical groove in the middle. The base projects above the top. Remains of the pale green glaze are visible on the bottom. Vertically decorated bottom: from top to bottom—a flat sun disc(?), a large mn-sign(?), a big gold sign.

Typology: flat lunate head; clypeus (with base notch) smooth in front; plates seem to be damaged. Segmentation of pronotum and elytra through single lines; rounded humeral callosities, which form a backward-oriented point; the high legs, naturally shaped, clearly stick out of the base, so that the sides of the scarab are open worked. Vertically decorated bottom: the throne name of Thutmose IV (1400–1390 v. Chr.) is located on the upper half of the field. The hieroglyphs below are partly damaged, and as such are no longer intelligible. Egyptian production.

The external limit of the head merges into the clypeus. Clypeus and plates form a unit; a line separates the pronotum from the elytra, which are divided by a double line into two parts. The humeral callosities are proportionally big and rendered as incised triangles. Well rendered legs, which appear as bars on the compact body of the scarab. Horizontally decorated bottom: two vertical nb-baskets are at the sides of the incised oval. In between, a Maat-feather pointed to the right and two horizontal nb-baskets, one above the other. Without a linguistic meaning. Not an Egyptian production.

Typology: trapezoidal head with internal decoration; clypeus and plates form a unit. Back is possibly plain and not structured, but its surface is heavily grazed. Grooves shaping a triangle replace the legs. Horizontally decorated bottom: a bearded lying sphinx looking to the right is situated inside an irregular oval. The sphinx is not Egyptian; it is stylized with forelegs held upright. An ankh-sign is horizontally located above the back of the sphinx. Asiatic production.

Cache	V-13/2
Level	I_04
Phase	07_O_Mid
LCS	V-13_IIIb
Cache Description	Locus was merged in /4. This cache refers to two rooms, one paved, one with two large storage jars still standing in the corners, the walls of the rooms showing grain as if the complex had been used for storage. The loci from /2 to /4 indicate a group of rooms.
